3 Figure 2. Non-verbal Communication Different surveys have shown that non-verbal communication channels covers the 70% or even the 90% of workplace communication (Dumbrava and Koronka, 2009; Gabbott and Hogg, 2001). In addition, Butkeviciene et al. (2008) highlighted the importance of use of non-verbal components for business purposes as they have greater impact.

Abstract. There are many diverse forms of barrier which impede the communications process. These barriers are particularly important in the context of the spatial sciences, but our understanding of their nature and significance is scant, as is out knowledge of the most appropriate way to handle them in modelling and policy assessment exercises.

Communication can be defined as process of using, word, sound or visual cues to supply information to one or more people. A communication process is defined as information that is shared with the intent that the receiver understands the message that the business intended to send. The communication process was once thought of as having the source of the message, which is then encoded, put ...
