There is a point in River Out of Eden when the stark brutality of nature really hits home. With a nervous system programmed to kill anything that moves near its young unless it emits a babies cry, a deaf mother turkey mistakes her children for predators and, in a bid to protect them, ends up massacring every last one.

(2) A virtue is a character trait a human being, given her (human) nature, needs for eudaimonia. Given that we modern virtue ethicists have made a point of defining our position in contrast to those of utilitarians and deontologists, it would, I think, be anachronistic to describe Hume as one of us. But, given just these two basic
