In statistics, a sequence or a vector of random variables is homoscedastic / $\hat{\sigma}^2$ if all random variables in the sequence or vector have the same finite variance. This is also known as homogeneity of variance. The complementary notion is called heteroscedasticity. The spellings homoskedasticity and heteroskedasticity are also frequently used.

Testing Statistical Assumptions

In statistics, Levene's test is an inferential statistic used to assess the equality of variances for a variable calculated for two or more groups. Some common statistical procedures assume that variances of the populations from which different samples are drawn are equal. Levene's test assesses this assumption.

Recently, a colleague of mine asked for some advice on how to compute interrater reliability for a coding task, and I discovered that there aren't many resources online written in an easy-to-understand format " most either 1) go in depth about formulas and computation or 2) go in depth about SPSS without giving many specific reasons for why you'd make several important decisions.

The measure of location or averages or central tendency is not sufficient to describe the characteristics of a distribution, because two or more distributions may have averages which are exactly alike, even though the distributions are dissimilar in other aspects, and on the other hand, measure of central tendency represents the typical value of the data set.
